What we covered this week...

Writing: We are close to finishing taking notes on our fourth and final chapter of our informational writing book. Students learned about preparing for the journey, daily life, and dangers and difficulties of the Oregon Trail.

Math: This week, students learned about several different types of polygons. Ask your child about the different ways they can classify triangles and quadrilaterals.

Spelling: We are practicing our spelling words every morning during morning work. Your student is writing them twice, putting them in ABC order, and deciding whether or not they are spelled correctly.

Social Studies: Students continued their interactive journey on the Oregon Trail. They now each have a pioneer identity and have helped their wagon group buy the necessary supplies for the long journey in the 1840s.

Reading: This week, we focused on sustaining in silent independent reading. Research shows that this is one of the best things to improve reading levels. Make sure your kiddo is still reading at home every night!

Jefferson City Field Trip

We are asking that all students are dropped off at school by 7:45 that day.

We will be leaving for Jefferson City promptly at 8:00 am.

If you are unable to drop your student off at school and they will need transportation, please inform your child’s teacher ASAP!

Pencils Needed!

Our classrooms are running out of pencils. If you are able to donate another pack or two, that would be greatly appreciated! Bonus appreciation for pre-sharpened ones :)
